Endorsements:

"This is a splendid and very readable book on housing and urban planning for degrowth. The degrowth perspective implies a decrease in the social metabolism and an increase in communality and conviviality. There are many chapters on actual types of degrowth housing in many countries and fundamental discussions of top-down versus bottom-up urban planning leading to these objectives. This book should become a textbook for courses in architecture, and urban and rural planning."

— Joan Martinez Alier, Emeritus Professor of Economics and Economic History and Senior Researcher at ICTA, Autonomous University of Barcelona, and Co-director of the EJAtlas (www.ejatlus.org)

"Degrowth is not just a theory — it is practice and it has policy implications. This fantastic collection of new essays shows how a degrowth mindset opens new ways of thinking alternatives and solutions to what is becoming a truly global housing crisis."

— Giorgos Kallis, ICREA Research Professor at Universitat Autònoma de Barcelona, and a co-editor of Degrowth: A Vocabulary for a New Paradigm (2014)

"This book brings together astonishingly rich views on sustainable urban development, wholly local but with a global coverage. It fits in with trends away from evermore centralised decision making for growth towards local independence. Decentralised autonomy can halt encroachment of global organisations in private life, with communal housing at its core."

— Gjalp Hupples, Senior Researcher, Institute of Environmental Sciences (CML) at Leiden University, Netherlands

Housing for Degrowth

Principles, Models, Challenges and Opportunities

Edited by Anitra Nelson and François Schneider

Series: Routledge Environmental Humanities

This collection of diverse responses engages with various challenges posed by housing for degrowth, across both the Global North and South, including housing justice and sufficiency, development and sustainability. Activist-scholar contributors offer case studies that engage with theoretical perspectives and provide critiques of various approaches to housing for degrowth. The book explores many environmental, cultural and economic issues in the context of interdisciplinary fields such as urbanism, ecological economics, environmental justice, housing studies and policy and planning studies and policy. As such, it will appeal to students and scholars across a wide range of disciplines.
